54th International AICA Congress, Valparaíso / Buenos Aires 2022

What Are We Talking About When We Talk About Art Criticism in the 21st Century?

The Asociación Argentina de Críticos de Arte (AACAA – Argentinean Association of Art Critics, AICA Argentina) and the Asociación Internacional de Críticos de Chile (Chilean Association of Art Critics, AICA Chile) are jointly organizing the Congreso Internacional AICA ¿De qué hablamos cuando hablamos de la crítica en el siglo XXI? (International AICA Congress What Are We Talking About When We Talk About Art Criticism in the 21st Century?), which will be held this year in the cities of Valparaíso and Buenos Aires from November 14 to 19.

As a symbolic expression of social concerns, today's art calls for us to reflect on the times in which we live, which have been marked by the COVID-19 pandemic, raising questions not only in the domain of health, but everywhere in the world where it has wreaked havoc, by exacerbating existing inequalities and deep-seated problems affecting the most fragile societies. This combination of factors has cut off societies and thrown communities into isolation, creating a powerful impact on institutional agendas, starkly exposing the digital divide and provoking new challenges in the art world, while manifestations of discontent have spilled over into the street in some countries and have generated actions and public practices that have shifted towards the expressive/symbolic sphere usually reserved for art practice. The military conflict in Europe comes on top of the situation created by the pandemic. The Russian invasion of Ukraine on February 24 reactivates concerns over nuclear weapons and raises the spectre of a third world war. The horrors of warfare become visible, over and above the toll of death and destruction, in the drama of millions of refugees fleeing from the conflict zone.

This context makes it indispensable for us to reflect, revise and discuss current problematics in the fields of criticism and curating. Multiple perspectives the Congreso Internacional AICA ¿De qué hablamos cuando hablamos de la crítica and a range of ambiguities open up in the fields of art and criticism. For example, feminist critique of the nature of relationships of power and knowledge has revealed different types of exclusion that persist in the art world, particularly in the areas of gender, ethnicity and class. In this sense, the contemporary arts have expanded and defied both theory and criticism, by proposing problematics linked, for example, to discrimination, invisibility and gender stereotypes. As a result, cultural theorists face the challenge of analyzing creations mediated by identity constructions that question the art system and the discourse that regulates it. The processes of de-naturalizing sexuality have broadened the boundaries of criticism and curating by being subjected to interrogation by queer and feminist works that aim to subvert established discourse.

In the face of this uncertainty and the challenges it creates, the Congreso Internacional AICA ¿De qué hablamos cuando hablamos de la crítica en el siglo XXI? (AICA International Congress What Are We Talking About When We Talk about Art Criticism in the 21st Century?) invites us to think about revising the role of art criticism, with special attention to gender and diversity, and the memories these evoke.

The thematic lines we propose, to generate debate, are:

1. Art institutions and museums in the new virtual panorama.
2. Educational curating: from the schoolroom experience to the screen.
3. Biennales and exhibitions. Reflections on the new, post-pandemic context.
4. New audiences and strategies for overcoming the digital divide.
5. Art critics in the face of differences. Ethnic-racial and gender discrimination.
6. Art and criticism in the face of historical traumas provoked by the health emergency and the context of war and migrations.
7. Memories of authoritarian processes, social conflicts and upheaval.
8. Art and activism: art, politics and citizenship.
